Preface

These anthems are drawn from many sources representing the noblest schools of church music. The selections are of varying degrees of difficulty, but not one of them is too difficult for performance by a choir reasonably diligent in rehearsal. The tradition of many of the best Schools of Church Music calls for unaccompanied singing, a number of the Anthems in this book are intended to be sung unaccompanied; an optional accompaniment, however, has been supplied in each case.

The words for which many of these compositions were originally written cannot be used in modern Protestant churches. Not only is the language—Latin, German or Russian—unfamiliar to our congregations, but in many instances it is the expression of a theology remote from modern Protestant thought. This is especially the case with passages taken from the Office of the Roman Mass, or the Divine Liturgy of the Eastern Church. In such instances it does not suffice simply to translate the Latin or the Russian into English. If these musical compositions—among the noblest and most moving expressions of religious emotion which the world has known—are to be used at all in our churches to-day, fresh English words must be provided which will be an appropriate and legitimate expression of modern belief.

The editors clearly recognize the well-nigh insuperable difficulty of doing this satisfactorily. It is never easy to arrange new words to old music, words which shall both suit the musical form and have a clear and rational meaning. This is supremely difficult when one attempts to substitute for the noble, sonorous, full-vowelled Latin of the "Adoramus te" and the "O bone Jesu," English words which shall in any degree worthily express the profound emotion of the music. There are those, indeed, who say that such a substitution should not be attempted, and that the music should be sung only to the original words. The editors, however, believe that the attempt is justified on the plea that, otherwise, music of this type would never be heard in the great majority of our churches. We believe it to be a service to the religious life of our day to make available these musical compositions which are so moving an expression of the religious spirit.

In most instances we have retained the original words for which the works of English composers were written, though here and there with some slight modifications to fit them the better to modern thought. The whole purpose has been to provide words which shall be free from theological and dogmatic implications, and which shall be the genuine expression of the worship of to-day, since such words alone have a fitting place in the conduct of worship.

Index of First Lines

	Page
Alleluia, Lord God! Worthy art Thou	63
Break forth, O beauteous heavenly light	7
Glory and worship are before Him	70
God is a spirit	73
God, my King, Thy might confessing	77
Grant me true courage, Lord	132
Hail, holy Light!	1
Hallelujah, Amen!	82
Happy and blest are they	20
Hear my prayer, O Lord	60
Hide not Thou Thy face from us	120
How beautiful are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings	9
How blest are they whom Thou hast chosen	32
How lovely are the messengers	42
In Thee, O Lord, have I trusted	123
Lead me, O Lord, in Thy righteousness	134
Let my prayer come up into Thy presence	5
Like as the hart desireth the water brooks	136
Lo, a voice to heaven sounding	90
Lord, for Thy tender mercies' sake	125
O come, let us worship	66
O God, we pray that Thou will be our guide	94
O holy Father, infinite in mercy	96
O Lord, increase my faith	130
O Lord, Thou hast formed my every part	128
O Lord, we pray that Thou wilt give us peace	142
O sing unto the Lord (Hassler)	98
O sing unto the Lord (Purcell)	102
O Thou, from whom all blessings come	105
O Thou joy of loving hearts	88
Rejoice in the Lord alway	108
Surely he hath borne our griefs	17
Teach me, O Lord, the way of Thy statutes	144
The heavens are telling the Lord's endless glory	114
Thou knowest, Lord, the secrets of my heart	148
To God on high be thanks and praise	118
Triumph! Thanksgiving	52
Turn Thy face from my sins	152
We gather together to ask the Lord's blessing	58
Ye sons and daughters of the King	38
